Archie Brevitt's Amazing Chivalric Escapade Univ of California Press

Archie Brevitt is in for a shock - not only is he a wizard (news to him) but rumour has it his missing parents were infamous thieves and murderers! Unexpectedly back in the magical world surrounding Crackenridge Castle, Archie's arrival is met with suspicion and gossip. He is quickly drawn into a race to be first to recover treasure hidden long ago in the castle walls and finds himself in possession of a mysterious and valuable golden gem - a magical gem that the powerful wizard, Erron Goulding, will stop at nothing to steal. Full of the extraordinary, with gargoyles, medieval knights, witches and wizards.

Baggrundshistorier for rock'n'roll-scenen år 2013

Cretan Cults and Festivals Antarctic Press

First published in 2006. A rapid advance of Cretan studies in recent years is a measure of their importance for our understanding of the early history of European civilization. It is now generally recognized that the island of Crete played a part in this early history which is out of all proportion to its size. This book offers information on the social history: from early times until the Roman Occupation

Revealing Eden Lulu.com

"A Tibetan monk came back as a minister but had to return to Tibet to locate a manuscript he had hidden centuries ago. A prehistoric cannibal from the Great Indian Desert came back as the manager of an elegant apartment complex. A woman, in love with her cousin but prevented from marrying him, came back to meet her lover again--but this time she was a man. A slave with a talent for painting came back as a white woman, also a painter--but she can only paint black faces. These came back! And they remembered. We have all come back, but we don't all recall how and when we lived before. How often have you thought, upon meeting someone for the first ime, 'I know you,' even though circumstances seemed to indicate you could never have met? You fall into conversation as if you were old friends; you seem to know so much about each other. Perhaps you are continuing a friendship that was interrupted a hundred--or even a thousand--years ago. We all have lived many lifetimes. As children we seem to be able to remember them. In adolescence, as we are more and more influenced by society, we lose touch with our past lives in confronting the problems of the present. But sometimes, in some people, the memories and recollections return in later years, and they are as real as the memories and recollections of the present lifetime. They may come simply in a dream or in meditation or in meeting a stranger who is not really a stranger, or they may come in more exotic forms--told by a medium or an astrologer or in an out-of-body experience. Richard Webb has sought out people who have such memories. He has interviewed them and, where possible, has attempted to confirm or deny their stories by public record. In These Came Back he tells sixteen of the countless stories he has collected. Reincarnation cannot yet be proved scientifically, but neither can it be disproved. But for these who came back, there can be no other explanation."--front and back flaps.

Monk saw a sign. It was that sign that brought a Buddhist monk off the roads of West Texas to the Ataboy Diner. Not only the sign but the secrets he keeps. The locals soon give him another mystery to solve: the not-so-great train robbery. From chicken round ups to rodeos our bare-backed, backwards-riding Monk is called on time and again to tell a story: He tells about Issa the Mason who Wouldn't Be King, about the Death of the Phoenix, about Opossum Boy and a Ghost Thief. He tells these stories to a crazy cast of characters including townies like waitress Isabella, the Queen of the Proverb, and to passers-thru like Bubba the wise trucker and the New Agers of the Caravan called the Gift...Come on in and sit a spell! Pull up a booth and settle in. Let Monk tell you a story!
