Across the country, communities rely on their planning commissions for guidance. But who guides the planning commissioners? This step-by-step guidebook gets new commissioners off on the right foot and helps experienced commission members navigate their roles. The authors, all practicing planners, have worked extensively with planning commissions for decades. They have watched commissioners scramble up a steep learning curve, sit in the hot seat of controversy, and strive to make sound decisions for the places they call home. In this helpful handbook, the authors share ideas, insights, and information to help commissioners succeed. Eight detailed chapters cover everything from the nuts and bolts of development applications to the nuances of legal issues to the part commissioners play in long-range planning. Readers will learn how to prepare for their first commission meeting, review a development plan, invite productive public input, and steer clear of ethical dilemmas. Added resources include a glossary of planning terms, a list of training resources, and the American Planning Association's Statement of Ethical Principles in Planning. For anyone serving on a planning commission, The Planning Commissioners Guide is essential reading.

A good working relationship with members of the governing board is crucial for every local government manager. New Council Member Orientation: Instilling the Spirit of High Performance outlines how a well-organized, informative, and appropriate orientation program ensures that the newly elected council members' first impression of their new partners in government is a good one. The orientation should reflect the circumstances of the community, the needs of the new council members, and the manager's style. This e-book singles out the necessary components of a good orientation, discusses practices that seem to work well in any situation, leads the reader through the planning process, and provides case examples.
