Maggie invites children to walk with her through her beloved city, so she can point out some of the places she can find God. She knows "There is no spot where God is not," as she has learned from a Karen Drucker song, and she enjoys sharing this with everyone who reads this book. This is the third in a series of spiritual "I Can ..." books for children. Written in rhyme, it is the perfect book for parents and grandparents to share with children to help children experience and develop their own spirituality. Children will be led to find their own places where God can be found. It is beautifully illustrated in great detail by St. Augustine artist Linda M. Brandt. The lyrics and music to Karen Drucker's song are included in this book with permission. Essays on American Writers

The popular worship song

“God of This City” was written by Aaron Boyd, lead singer of Bluetree, while they were on a mission trip to Thailand. Near the end of a gig in a bar beneath a brothel in one of the world’s sex-trade capitals, Aaron began to sing to the city that “greater things are yet to come / greater things are still to be done in this city.” Within a few days, the full lyrics had emerged; within a few months, the song was ringing in Bluetree’s hometown of Belfast, where the promise of “greater things” is starting to bear fruit. “God of This City” eventually became the anthem of the Passion international worship conferences, but there is more to the song than an inspiring melody and unusual history. In God of This City, the book, Aaron Boyd unpacks the lyrics of the song, and along the way shares his thoughts on the state of the Church, the persistent injustice in the world and the biblical mandate to right the wrongs done to our global neighbors. Many local churches and ministries have taken “God of This City” as a rallying cry for their own communities, and the book is a further challenge for the Body of Christ to be an agent of His change—living lives of worship marked by actions of justice in a world longing for greater things.

This book explores contemporary writers' use of nonrepresentational techniques, similar to those of ancient rabbis who composed classical Midrash, as they grapple with the violence of our era. With particular attention paid to Holocaust literature, the book identifies an important trend in literature about collective trauma.

The author captures the essence of our very thoughts if God exists in her passionate poem "God, Are You

Listening?" I know I shouldn't doubt you That indeed You are in everything From the day sky so blue To the Sunset in the Evening Daily Your power I see But then why sometimes is it so hard to believe? She then takes on a trip to believing in God in "Thank You, Jesus." But most of all, Jesus, thank You for Your love A love so deep and powerful that it has transcended through time Never	wavering...but remaining true True to those who choose to believe in You. She then slides into celebrating God with lyrics like "Dancing for Jesus" Now that you are set free And cleansed of spiritual debris Let's praise our Lord with song and dance Yes, dance for Jesus like there'll never be another chance Stomp your feet on the head of the serpent For that's where he must remain Yes, stomp him down into	the ground Now raise your hands and praise the Lord For long ago He declared victory and "Call On God" Hope still resides in our small city Just call on God The only one with the remedy Bow, pray, and seek his face Only then will this city fall to His Grace Call to God The only One who can change this place Biblical Project Management Review and Herald Pub Assoc No description available

 It often happens that people compromise their faith to suit their lifestyle. Their black and white sense of right and wrong gets trapped in a gray area. In NO COMPROMISE, founder and president of Family Policy Institute (FPI), Errol Naidoo, maintains that the major reason for the moral decline in the world today is the lack of conviction and commitment of Christians to be salt and light in society. Even though prayer is the foundation of everything a Christian does, NO COMPROMISE states that Christians shouldn't "just pray" and not engage in politics and social issues.

Naidoo spurs readers on not only to be people of prayer, but also people of action. They should adjust their lifestyle according to their faith, no compromise!
