Industrial Economics: Indian Perspective Sarup & Sons

A close interrelationship between management and economics had led to the development of managerial economics. Economic analysis is required for various concepts such as demand, profit, cost, and competition. In this way, managerial economics is considered as economics applied to "problems of choice" or alternatives and allocation of scarce resources by the firms. Managerial economics is a discipline that combines economic theory with managerial practice. It helps in covering the gap between the problems of logic and the problems of policy. The subject offers powerful tools and techniques for managerial policy making. It is in this context, a textbook on introduction to the subject of Managerial Economics is presented to the students of Management program. The book contains the syllabus from basics of the subjects going into the intricacies of the subjects. All the concepts have been explained with relevant examples and diagrams to make it interesting for the readers. An attempt is made here by the experts to assist the students by way of providing case based study material as per the curriculum with non-commercial considerations. India is known as a 'Country or Home of Cotton Textiles'. Since a long because cotton was probably grown, spun and woven into cloth in the country than anywhere else in the world. Cotton was known to the Indians 2000 years ago. The excavation of Mahanjo-Daro and Harappa Civilization revealed that Cotton and weaving was well known during the ancient period. The Indian cotton textiles were famous throughout the world for their beauty and fineness. Moreover, India was an exporter of textile products especially muslin, silk and cloths since the early days until the dawn of industrial revolution in Europe. The Europeans were mad of Indian Muslin.

The book shows that the instant need to feed the teeming millions propelled us to increase the use of chemical fertilizers and adopt better agricultural practices which have created multifaced problems in agriculture. However, these methods have been killing the natural fertilizing potential of soil. The persistently growing use of external nutrients has enormously raised the cost of farming thus turning agriculture into an unremunerative occupation. Excessive use of chemical fertilizers has also been causing long-term hazards to soil fertility and intensifying the need of subsidy on domestic and imported fertilizers. All these hinder sustainable growth of agriculture. The study also shows that prices of inputs , which farmers have been using, have increased at a much faster rate than those of agriculture output causing impoverishment, in real sense, among them and making agriculture an occupation of last resort.

The global capitalism has entered into a new and distinct phase, wherein liberalisation, privatisation and globalisation (commonly called LPG) is a central theme. Almost every country, particularly the developing countries, are on the agenda of international monopolies and international financial capital which are controlled and regulated by the industrially developed nations. The vulnerable economies all over the world are being forced to liberalise their economies resulting in unfavourable balance of competitive forces on their side. Free trade rules are dismantling the 'License Raj' meant for business and industry under the dictate of global corporations. Market forces have been given once again a primacy to make the major economic decisions. "The free trade systems of small producers and poor consumers are being dismantled and being made illegal in order to create free trade systems for big business and global corporations."¹ All these have been the outcome of certain policy initiatives and developments that have taken place at the national and international level especially since the 1980s.

The key of Managerial Economics is the micro-economic theory of the firm. It lessens the gap between economics in theory and economics in practice. Managerial Economics is a science dealing with effective use of scarce resources. It guides the managers in taking decisions relating to the firm's customers, competitors, suppliers as well as relating to the internal functioning of a firm. It makes use of statistical and analytical tools to assess economic theories in solving practical business problems. Study of Managerial Economics helps in enhancement of analytical skills, assists in rational configuration as well as solution of problems. While microeconomics is the study of decisions made regarding the allocation of resources and prices of goods and services, macroeconomics is the field of economics that studies the behavior of the economy as a whole (i.e. entire industries and economies). The purpose of this study Material is to present an introduction to the subject Managerial Economics of M.Com New Semester pattern syllabus.
